

Healthcare skills of asylum seekers and refugees in Northern Ireland

Law Centre NI and UNISON have worked together to determine the healthcare skills of asylum seekers and refugees in Northern Ireland.

In March 2022, we distributed a simple online survey to:

- Identify existing healthcare qualifications, skills and experiences.
- Establish the level of interest in healthcare-related employment within the asylum-seeking community.
- Identify barriers to employment within the refugee community.

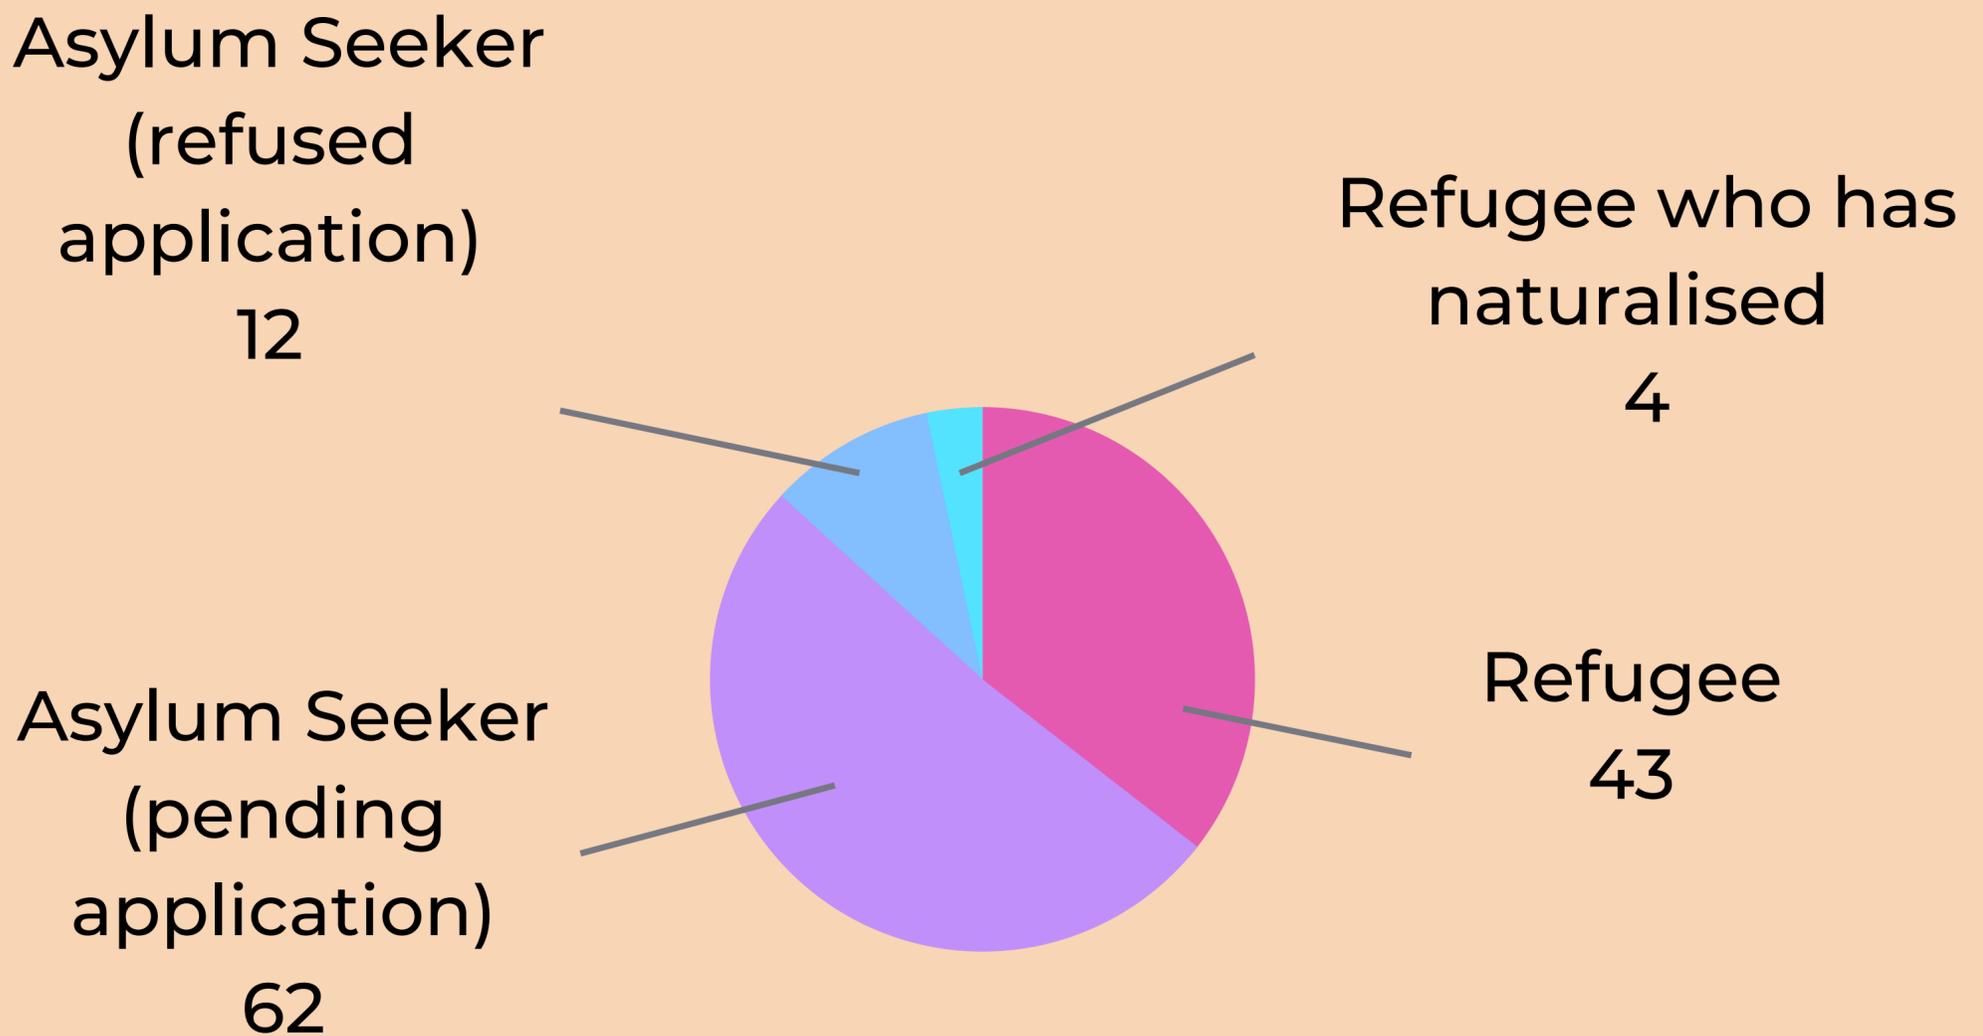

The survey attracted a total of 145 responses and the key findings are set out below.

While the survey primarily provides quantitative data, respondents were asked to comment on their interest in working (pg 5). Responses clearly demonstrate a keen desire to work. 86 respondents consented for their details to be stored to notify them about developments relating to access to work in the healthcare sector for refugees and asylum seekers.

Note that the survey was conducted in English and no translations were provided. This was to target people most likely to be considered as 'job ready' and also means that there are likely to be numerous qualified medical professionals whose skills and qualifications are not reflected in these findings.

Overall numbers

Responses are from the following immigration categories:

66 people stated they were a qualified health professional, with practice experience of:

0-2 years
